A ROUND OF TALK.

Let Us Go A Fishing.

(By Solon L. Goodie.)
O, let us go a-fishing.
Where the stream is clear and cool.
Where the graceful willow hedges
The deep waters of the pool.
See, the sun is growing warmer
And its beams are soft and bright.
As they kiss the sweetest odors
Of the dogwood's bloom of white.

O, let us go a-fishing.
In these rhythmic days of Spring,
And be gladdened by the robins
And the lullabies they sing.
Behold the skies are fairer
Than they've ever been before.
As we see our fishing shadows
In the ripples by the shore.

Who would not go a-fishing
When the fields of wheat are green,
When the very trees are joyous
In the rich rippling sheen?
How our souls are set a-quiver
As we wait and watch and dream.
And we trust along with nature
As we wait and watch and dream.

And while we sit a-fishing
There seems mirrored from on high
The glory of a Being
Who ascended to the sky.
Let the men who were fishing
On the waves of Galilee,
We may hear his sweet voice saying
"Come, thou friend, and follow me."

And, O, would you be a-fisher
Of the weary sons of men,
You may find the hardest burdens
And give peace to men again.
Then when harvests are garnered
And the sheaves are in the fold
There will come a benediction
The most blessed ever told.

TALKING TEMPERANCE—
The all absorbing topic of conversation throughout the county appears to be just now the liquor question, since the passage of the county unit bill by the last Legislature, which makes possible for the county to vote whiskey selling out of Springfield and all other points in the county. The temperance people have gone to work and a strong public sentiment has been aroused against whiskey selling.

It is safe to say that if a question was submitted to a vote of the people just now the saloons would have to go. It will be impossible however under the requirements of the new law to hold an election earlier than about the first of September. The law will not go into effect until June 15, for ninety days after its passage and then sixty days notice is required after a petition is put before the county judge before an election can be held, so that August 15th is the earliest possible date at which an election can take place.

There has been considerable discussion of the subject of bringing liquor into the county should the sale of it be prohibited. The bill passed by the Legislature relating to that subject is quite plain. It says that: "It shall be unlawful for any person or persons, individual or corporation, public or private carrier to bring into, transfer to other person or persons, corporation, carrier, or agent deliver or distribute, in any county, district, precinct, town or city, where the sale of intoxicating liquors has been prohibited, whether by special act of the General Assembly, or by vote of two people under the local option law, any spirituous, vinous, malt or any other intoxicating liquors." The law further provides however that individuals may bring into such districts upon their person or as their personal baggage and for their private use such liquors in quantity not exceeding one gallon. The law also permits licensed physicians and druggists to receive liquor in quantities not to exceed five gallons at one time. The penalty for violating this law is a fine of not less than fifty or more than one hundred dollars for each offense.

BUILDING ROADS—The Washington County Fiscal Court at its meeting last week developed quite a wave of liberty in the way of appropriations for public improvements. About $4,500 was appropriated for building two much needed roads in the county. This donation on the part of the county is to be supplemented by an almost equal amount to be raised by private subscriptions, which shows how greatly in earnest the citizens of the county in their demands for good roads. We have heard the criticism made against the action of the Board of Magistrates to the effect that it would be better to spend the money in improving the turnpikes already built in the county rather than to build more.

The building of these two short lines of pike need not interfere with the improving of the other turnpikes throughout the county. The citizens in each particular locality were interested in these roads to the extent of putting up a large amount of money from their own pockets and it was nothing more than right for the county to do its share. The appropriation for the maintenance of the turnpikes over the county need not be effected at all. The road superintendents are at work letting contracts for the road work and it is hoped by the end of the summer to make a marked improvement in the condition of our pikes. There has been some "knocking" on the present plan of working the roads just as there would be on any plan devised, but we should give the Superintendents a fair and thorough test before condemning the system.

PROMPT RESPONSE—Washington county has the credit of being among the first to respond to the invitation to aid in the preparations for the entertainment of visitors in Louisville during Home Coming week. The Fiscal Court very promptly appropriated $38 for the purpose of providing a book for the registering of names of former Washington county people who are expected to visit the headquarters, which will be provided for each county at the armory in Louisville. From this fund there would be provided handsome badges to be given to all Washington county visitors. Gov. Beckham will name a commissioner from each county who is to have charge of the headquarters and whose duty it will be to welcome the visitors, distribute badges, etc. The commissioner may appoint some lady to act as hostess and he may also name an assistant commissioner. The hostess may also name an assistant.

A few doses started the trickiest line of business and now I have no pain across my kidneys and I feel like a new man. It has done me $1000 worth of good." James Buckman, a thirteen year old colored boy, used his knife on Prof. K. Smith principal of the local colored public school when the latter attempted to whip him Friday afternoon for disobeying the rules. Prof. Smith swore out a warrant for the boy and Officer Mattingly arrested him Sunday night. Monday morning Judge Tromb had the boy's mother finish the job attempted by Prof. Smith; Jailer Madden acting as umpire. Buckman was the discharge, but the matter will be referred to the grant jury. This teacher was slightly out about the hand and arm.—Leb. Enterprise.

Death of Mrs. Coulter.

(Hillsboro correspondent)
The angel of death visited this community Wednesday morning and took from our midst Mrs. Miserva Coulter, widow of the late Spencer Coulter. Mrs. Coulter was at the time of her death 80 years, 10 months and 14 days of age and had been for 52 years a member of the Baptist church at Rockville and was ever true to her profession of religion. Many noble traits of character adorn her life. The home in which she reared her children was a model one and when they pitched their craft on life's sea she was a light for them to be constantly guided by. Her mission on earth was also fulfilled and the death angel called to take her to the golden shore where there is no sorrow, no death but sweet peace and eternal rest. The funeral was conducted Friday at the church by Rev. W. E. Suterland he for a large crowd of sorrowing relatives and friends, after which her body was tenderly laid to rest beside that of her husband to await resurrection morn and then arise to walk in the newness of life.

McCHORD HONORED

Elected Vice President National Railroad Commission.

A special from Washington says—Hon. C. C. McChord, chairman of the Kentucky Railroad Commission, came within one vote of being elected president of the National Railroad Commissioners at their meeting last week. The Vice presidency was then given him unanimously.

Mr. McChord made no effort to get the place, but the ability with which he participated in the proceedings of the convention recommended him to the delegates for the honor. Mr. McChord would have been elected president on the first ballot only that four of his friends were unavoidably absent.

A SLIGHT MISTAKE
"I think I believe James Harwood intends to propose to you tonight."

"But, mother, he is so much older than I am."

"Well, child, if your heart does not draw you to him, I will not press you, but I think he is a man any woman might feel proud of, and in my marrying days."

"Why do you talk of my marrying days when they were over, mother? Do you never think of marrying again?"

"My darling, you forget my age."

Whatever else she may have been contemplating saying was cut off by the announcement of "Mr. James Harwood," a gentleman who in a short time followed his name and greeted the two ladies rather nervously as he entered.

He sat down and for a little while tried to maintain his share in a general conversation, but he seemed uncomfortable and talked in a somewhat perturbed manner, as though something were weighing on his mind.

At last Mrs. Singleton, thinking it polite to leave the two together, made some excuse to go out and rose from her seat. She had reached the door when James Harwood, with an evident effort, bowed forward in his chair and said quickly, "These don't go, Mrs. Singleton." She stopped on the point of leaving the room and came back. She believed that he desired her consent first and thoroughly approved of the straightforward course. Looking at Elsie she said gently:

"I wish, darling, you would answer these cards for me that are in the drawing room. I feel a little fatigued after my drive."

Without requiring a second bidding the girl departed lightly on her errand, leaving her mother alone with her visitor.

Mrs. Singleton was sitting on a low sofa, and James Harwood sat in his chair and went to sit beside her, his nervousness becoming more marked as he did so. He looked straight in front of him as he said:

"Mrs. Singleton, I wished—rather—to speak to you upon a subject."

"You will hear of me with me a moment while I—"

The lady noticed his agitation and was sorry for her. She tried to help him out.

"I think I know to what you are alluding. I have been expecting this, James—you will let me call you James—for some time. Please go on."

"It is kind of you to say that. It makes what I have to say much easier." He clasped one of his hands with both hands and for the first time looked straight into his companion's face. "I have recently had thoughts, my dear Mrs. Singleton, though I feel much difference in telling you—I have lately been contemplating marriage."

"That is exactly what I expected you to say, and I think at your age and in your position it is a very proper course to take."

Mary Kilde! But I want to marry you!

Mrs. Singleton jumped away from him to the other end of the sofa, and her face flushed scarlet as his meaning burst upon her.

There was silence between them for a few minutes. Mrs. Singleton's eyes were bent upon the ground, and she looked almost like a young girl who had listened to her first declaration of love as the blush on her cheek grew deeper and deeper, and then moved downward till it covered the whiteness of her neck. At last she spoke:

"And you have been meaning me all this time?"

Harwood, now that he saw the prize he thought he had won in danger of slipping from him, came out of his shell and surprised himself by the fervor of his own words.

"Yes, it is you that I love, you that I have hoped—and then hardly dared to hope—might love me a little in return. I was sure of myself as an earnest to fit up the emptiness in my life and in my heart. Oh, do not take the chance away that I thought I had finally won."

For a moment after he had ceased speaking she did not move. Then she turned her face up to his, with her eyes shining, brimful with a joy that she could not hide.

"James!"

"Yes."

"You may still kiss me."

When Richard Hicks, aged sixty-six, stepped in front of a Lake Erie freight train at McKean Rocks, Pa., he was knocked about twenty feet, shaken up and bruised a little bit, and lost his shoes.

They were torn off in some manner and lost in the darkness. But he held them in his old city pipe, which was where a pipe usually to be, between his teeth, and it was not injured.

He insisted on receiving an apology when he was picked up and when told what had happened consented to go to the hospital, although he insisted he was not hurt, and was giving a great deal of unnecessary trouble. At the hospital one of the house surgeons said he was another pair of shoes, and with a stitch or two in his scalp he went on his way happy.

"That is what I intended to convey. I said just now that I had been a little prepared for this, and I am very glad that you have given me the opportunity of saying as I truly think that no woman could wish to find a better husband."

DOES TOBACCO GROWING PAY

Arguments in Favor of Tobacco as a Money-Making Crop—By a Grower.

There has been considerable controversy in the county papers throughout the tobacco growing districts as to whether or not tobacco growing is of any advantage to the farmer. The Owen County Democrat says that Owen county would be better off to day if it were a plant of tobacco had been grown within her borders.

Mr. C. L. Renaker, grower, comes back at the Democrat as follows: "Don't you suppose if the farmer twenty years ago had combined with his neighbor and set a fair, living and improvement price on his tobacco that not only Owen county, but the entire tobacco belt would have been the banner county of America to-day, so far as agricultural wealth is concerned."

It is a known fact among the farmers who raise tobacco, that grass grows and thrives better after tobacco than any other staple crop. Then why has tobacco ruined the country any more than some other crop would have done?

You suggest that we should grow more grass, raise alfalfa and feed stock. What are we up against today in the cattle market? A beef trust. What are we up against today in the grain market? Chicago grain pit. What would we run up against if we raised more hay and sent it to market? A feed trust, and so on.

The first and most essential thing of all is for the farmers to organize and then we can raise tobacco, corn, hay and various things and receive a just compensation for our labor. If we farmers are as independent as our great law makers, our great capitalists and many others would have us to believe we are, why not assert our independence, not keep man and be run over by those who gain wealth by our toil?

I feel that the young farmer of today has a great battle to fight along commercial lines. Our forefathers cleared the wilderness and transformed it into beautiful fields and fertile valleys. Then came their children and transformed these into tobacco fields, without knowing what they would get for crops grown on such fields. Consequently, as I said in the beginning the barley belt as well as many other places where farmers are not combined, is on the verge of bankruptcy. Now we as young farmers, have got to make a price on what we grow, and at the same time improve and repair what our fathers have torn up and let go to waste. When we do this we can call farming a profession and demand our share of respect from the business world."

The Red Cross Drug Store positively guarantee a cure when Hyomel is used in accordance with the simple directions on the package, or they will refund the money. This certainly shows their faith and belief in the virtues of Hyomel.

When I got back to the camp," Orchard continued, "Neville was asleep, and I turned in. The next morning we started out early and traveled all day without meeting anybody. Along about midnight we passed a cabin, where a man stood in the door reading a newspaper.

"When did you leave the Creek?" he asked. "Yesterday afternoon, 3 o'clock," I answered. "Then you don't know the news," he said excitedly. He read the account, and Neville turned to me with a queer look. "You didn't hear anything of this when you went back for your gun, did you?" he asked. "Certainly not," I answered, but I knew then that he suspected me.

They went on to Denver and then to Cody, where apparently they did not find things quite as they had anticipated. Orchard found it prudent to keep on the move and went into Montana. After the Independence excitement had subsided Haywood sent for him and on his arrival he informed him that Neville had been back in Denver and knew too much. Neville had "gone inside" in Wyoming, and with his boy, had returned and walked boldly into the office of the "editorial" I want to say," he said meaningly, and he got it.
